GAS TAX DIVERSION BILL IS BEFORE HOUSE

CONCERNS SHARE
WHICH COUNTIES

CITY REPRESENTATIVES CON-
TEND HIGHWAY COMMITTEE HAS MANY RURALITES

TWIN CITIES AND DULUTH MEN
TAKE A DEFINITE STAND IN MATTER

By HECTOR PERRIER
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
St. Paul, Feb. 5.—Somewhat hoarse and still a little red behind the ears following their first attempt at public singing late Monday, members of the house today turned to the gasoline tax diversion bill which is expected to cause the first major tilt between rural and urban legislators. Perhaps the knowledge of what was ahead of them caused the representatives to take the dismal "dop" when they attempted to sing the "Battle Hymn of the Republic."

At any rate the public song fest was generally considered a "dud" and the derision of the audience put the singers in a fine frame of mind for the battle ahead.

The tax diversion bill concerns the division of the county's one-third of funds collected from the sale of gasoline.

City representatives contend that the house highway committee was "packed" with rural members and that the division is likely to be unfair to the cities of the first class.

The clause over which the fight will surely come is said to specify that "no county shall receive less than three-fourths of 1 per cent of the tax nor more than 3 per cent."

Representatives from Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth will undoubtedly protest on the grounds that these three counties foot a goodly share of the tax bill and should receive a larger share.

The fight may be hot and there will be little surprise if the rural representatives come out victorious. Developments in the session yesterday included:

Adoption of a resolution which would memorialize congress to pass legislation giving federal or Minnesota state courts jurisdiction in the hearing of damage appeal cases growing out of the flooding of property near Lake of the Woods. Sponsors of the resolution claimed that reports of government engineers on the damages were "misleading."

Representative Lewis, Long Prairie and Senator Serline, Mora, introduced bills in their respective chambers calling for an amendment of the truck and bus act of 1925 to give it teeth. Under the bill farmers and others hauling produce to market would be permitted to carry back loads for themselves or their neighbors but not for merchants or other distributors. At present there is no way to deal with violators of the law.

Governor Theodore Christianson signed the bill calling for a referendum on the stockholders' double liability law in the state elections, November, 1930. The constitutional amendment now proposed is much the same as those defeated in two previous elections.

After the operation at the Dr. Chevalier Jackson clinic of the graduate hospital of the University of Pennsylvania, the girl was resting comfortably. Doctors will keep her in the hospital for a few days to watch her condition.

Esther swallowed the tooth in December when her mother pulled it with a string.

The operation on the little girl was performed by inserting a tube into the lung. Equipped with a small electric light and a pair of mechanical fingers on the end, the tube is manipulated in conjunction with X-ray.

Chicago, Feb. 5.—(UP)—Investigation of the mysterious death of Mrs. Selma Burnham, wealthy manufacturer's widow, may be extended to include an inquiry into the death of her husband, Sanford A. Burnham, and the $1,000,000 gum vending machine business which he founded, it was learned today.

State's Attorney John A. Swanson assumed personal direction of the extensive investigation and announced he would seek the names of all purchasers of the Burnham slot machines which he charged have made fortunes for politicians under previous administrations.

It was indicated that the body of the manufacturer may be exhumed and examined for traces of poisoning. A similar examination of Mrs. Burnham's body is now being made by the coroner's office.

Burnham died last July 18, leaving to his widow his entire estate valued at $1,000,000. Later two step-daughters sought to have Mrs. Burnham removed as administrator of the estate. It was alleged she had become an habitual drunkard and was incapable of managing the estate.

A week ago the widow was brought to Garfield Park hospital in an unconscious condition. She died without regaining consciousness. Physicians refused to sign a death certificate. A post mortem report indicated the woman died of alcoholic excesses.

Edward T. Riley, civil engineer, was detained under bond pending investigation of the manner in which he assertedly obtained a half-interest in the Burnham Gum Machine Company for $5,000 cash.

Riley was the object of a statement made by Dr. Frank L. Brown, who first attended Mrs. Burnham and ordered her removed to a hospital.

"Mrs. Burnham was hysterical when I saw her," Dr. Brown said. "She cried continually 'I've lost everything, my home, my fortune, my business—Riley, he got it all!'"

DEBATE REJECTING HARRISON
AMENDMENT REVEALED
MUCH BITTERNESS

ONLY 16 OF THE 50 REPUBLICANS

PRESIDENT

By PAUL R. MALLON

Washington, Feb. 5.—Having defeated President Coolidge's plan for delaying construction of the 15 proposed naval cruisers, the senate proceeded today to dress its $274,000,000 building bill to its own liking in order that it might be passed later this afternoon.

The 54 to 28 defeat suffered by the champions of the president's plan left the self-styled "national defense bloc" in complete control of the field.

Mr. Coolidge had asked the senate to eliminate the clause of the bill which provides for construction of the new fighting fleet within the next three years, the keels to be laid at the rate of 5 a year. It was understood he is looking forward to a new disarmament conference early in the Hoover administration and he thought the time limit ought to be left to the discretion of the chief executive pending new disarmament conferences.

Some of the most stalwart support of the administration joined in the defeat of the president's plan. The amendment which sought to carry it out was introduced by a democrat, Harrison of Mississippi, and championed by the independent Norris of Nebraska who facetiously chided his republican brethren with the statement that "Now the political pie counter is empty, now that the cupboard is bare of political plums, you desert the cause of our leader."

When the votes were counted, it was found only 16 of the 50 republicans had stood with the president.

The others joined with the democrats to force construction of the ships at the earliest possible moment.

A ten minute limitation on debate went into effect at 4 P. M. yesterday so the senate contemplates reaching a final vote within the next few hours. A vote had been arranged last night but Senator Curtis, republican floor leader, acceded to the request of senators who wanted to go home to dinner, and moved a recess until noon today.

The debate which led up to rejection of the Harrison amendment revealed much bitterness on both sides. Senator Caraway, democrat, Arkansas, told the advocates of the bill they were "afraid to go to war yourselves but would send your neighbors into war." He likened the recent nationalistic speeches to the speeches made against the treaty of Versailles in 1919.

Among the senators for the Harrison amendment were:

Selhaver, formerly of Granite Falls, Minn., has been hunted since Aug. 12, 1924, when he and Sarah Elizabeth Johnson, the 16-year-old daughter of the Kingston farmer for whom Selhaver worked, disappeared.

Selhaver and the girl had been carrying on a love affair and had decided upon suicide, according to Selhaver's version of the crime. The girl was killed with a gun purchased in New York but Selhaver lacked the nerve to carry out his part of the bargain, he told Seattle police.

HOOVER NAMES
H. L. STIMSON AS SECRETARY OF STATE

LATTER IS PRESENT GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF THE PHILIPPINES

FORMER SECRETARY OF STATE
ELIHU ROOT FAVORED
STIMSON

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 5.—(UP)—President-elect Hoover has selected Henry L. Stimson, governor-general of the Philippines as secretary of state, it was learned here today on unimpeachable authority.

Stimson's name had been discussed in reports of the last few days, upon which President-elect Hoover had declined to comment, but it was learned today that he has been offered the post and will accept it.

Mr. Hoover in making the choice of his secretary of state influenced considerably by the advice of former Secretary of State Elihu Root, a former law partner of Stimson, former Secretary of State Charles Evans Hughes, and Chief Justice Taft of the supreme court, in whose administration Stimson was secretary of war. Hoover discussed the appointment with the before he left Washington.

Mr. Hoover also was impressed by Stimson's work in smoothing our difficulties in Nicaragua as personal representative of President Coolidge, which received a generally favorable response in that Central American country, long a storm center.

Mr. Hoover is known to believe the appointment will not only assure continuation of more settled relations in that country, but will tend to emphasize his general aim to improve relations with all of Central and South America during his administration.

When Mr. Hoover talked with Nicaraguan officials during his stop at Corinto, on his Latin-American cruise, he found general approval of Stimson's work there.

The Governor-general of the Philippines is returning to the United States soon.

Appointment of Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Stanford University, as secretary of interior, also was indicated here today as likely. Wilbur has secured a leave of absence from Stanford University.

WRECKED SCHOONER

Elizabeth City, N. C., Feb. 5.—(UP)—The crew of the four-masted schooner Bainbridge was rescued today by coast guards, who thrice braved high seas to bring ashore the eight men on the wrecked vessel.

The Bainbridge, bound for Fairhaven, Mass., from Jacksonville, Fla., with a load of lumber, broke up shortly after the crew was taken off.

The schooner went ashore before dawn, snagging on a reef a mile south of the Nagshead coast guard station. In the dim light of dawn the rescue was made, the lifeboat three times plunging through the heavy surf to the ship, until the eight men, clinging to the rigging, were safely ashore.

Roosevelt Field, L. I., Feb. 5.—(UP)—Capt. Frank M. Hawks set a new transcontinental flight record today by landing his "Air Express" at Roosevelt Field, at 2:59:30 P. M., after an air journey from Los Angeles.

He made the trip in 18 hours, 21 minutes, 59 seconds, bettering by more than half an hour the previous mark set by Art Goebel and the late Harry Tucker.

Hawks left Los Angeles at 5:37:30 Pacific coast time yesterday, and reached here at 2:58:30 P. M. EST today.

The end of the flight—with the new record it established, terminated a day almost without report of Hawks. From the time he passed over Tucson, Ariz., last night until he circled the town of Richlands, W. Va., at 11:17 A. M. today, apparently to get his bearings, he had not been sighted.

Meanwhile, fliers at Albuquerque, fearing he might have been forced down in an isolated section of New Mexico, debated the feasibility of searching for him.

Just before 3 P. M. the "Air Express," with its red fuselage and silver wings, appeared out of the west over the air field, flying at an altitude of about 300 feet and approaching at terrific speed.

It roared down, then zoomed up over the hangars and circled the field twice, while those on the ground waved and shouted.

After the second circle, Hawks nosed the plane down and brought it to the ground.

Hawks banked steeply several times at high speed, before landing. He was seated in the open cockpit behind the cabin, while his mechanic Oscar E. Grubb, was inside the cabin.

One hundred persons, besides the newspaper men and motion picture men, crowded about the plane and it was five minutes before the fliers could alight.

Eleven were killed in a landslide near Alma Ata, Russian Turkestan, and 26 were lost on the German cargo ship Diester when it went down in the port of Leixos, Portugal, yesterday.

Twenty fishermen were missing after a storm sank six fishing boats off Cape Finistere, Spain, an Exchange Telegraph dispatch received here early today from Madrid reported.

Many deaths were reported from all parts of Europe, including five in Constantinople, where the Bosphorus had a fringe of ice for the first time in 25 years.

Lindbergh's trip so far has been auspicious and true to form. He drove his powerful Sikorsky Amphibian steadily along, making perfect landings and arriving on scheduled time. Leaving Miami at 6:08 A. M. yesterday, he flew the 200 miles to Havana in two hours and 11 minutes, landing at 8:19. He left Havana at 9:23 and arrived here at 3:58 P. HOOVER NAMES H. L. STIMSON AS SECRETARY OF STATE

LATTER IS PRESENT GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF THE PHILIPPINES

FORMER SECRETARY OF STATE ELIHU ROOT FAVORED

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 5.—(U.P.)—President-elect Hoover has selected Henry L. Stimson, governor-general of the Philippines as secretary of state, it was learned here today on unimpeachable authority.

Stimson's name had been discussed in reports of the last few days, upon which President-elect Hoover had declined to comment, but it was learned today that he has been offered the post and will accept it.

Mr. Hoover in making the choice of his secretary of state influenced considerably by the advice of former Secretary of State Elihu Root, a former law partner of Stimson, former Secretary of State Charles Evans Hughes, and Chief Justice Taft of the supreme court, in whose administration Stimson was secretary of war. Hoover discussed the appointment with the before he left Washington.

Mr. Hoover also was impressed by Stimson's work in smoothing our difficulties in Nicaragua as personal representative of President Coolidge, which received a generally favorable response in that Central American country, long a storm center.

Mr. Hoover is known to believe the appointment will not only assure continuation of more settled relations in that country, but will tend to emphasize his general aim to improve relations with all of Central and South America during his administration.

When Mr. Hoover talked with Nicaraguan officials during his stop at Corinto, on his Latin-American cruise, he found general approval of Stimson's work there.

The Governor-general of the Philippines is returning to the United States soon.

COAST GUARDS SAVE CREW OF WRECKED SCHOONER

Elizabeth City, N. C., Feb. 5.—(U.P.)—The crew of the four-masted schooner Bainbridge was rescued today by coast guards, who thrice braved high seas to bring ashore the eight men on the wrecked vessel.

The Bainbridge, bound for Fairhaven, Mass., from Jacksonville, Fla., with a load of lumber, broke up shortly after the crew was taken off.

The schooner went ashore before dawn, snagging on a reef a mile south of the Nagshend coast guard station. In the dim light of dawn the rescue was made, the lifeboat three times plunging through the heavy surf to the ship, until the eight men, clinging to the rigging, were safely ashore.

CAPT. HAWKS SETS NEW RECORD WEST-EAST COAST

FLIES "AIR EXPRESS" IN NEW TRANSCONTINENTAL RECORD TODAY

BETERS BY HALF HOUR PREVIOUS MARK OF GOEBEL AND TUCKER

Roosevelt Field, L. I., Feb. 5.—(U.P.)—Capt. Frank M. Hawks set a new transcontinental flight record today by landing his "Air Express" at Roosevelt Field, at 2:59:30 P. M., after an air journey from Los Angeles.

He made the trip in 18 hours, 21 minutes, 59 seconds, bettering by more than half an hour the previous mark set by Art Goebel and the late Harry Tucker.

Hawks left Los Angeles at 5:37:30 Pacific coast time yesterday, and reached here at 2:58:30 P. M. EST today.

The end of the flight—with the new record it established, terminated a day almost without report of Hawks. From the time he passed over Tucson, Ariz., last night until he circled the town of Richlands, W. Va., at 11:17 A. M. today, apparently to get his bearings, he had not been sighted.

Meanwhile, fliers at Albuquerque, fearing he might have been forced down in an isolated section of New Mexico, debated the feasibility of searching for him.

Just before 3 P. M. the "Air Express," with its red fuselage and silver wings, appeared out of the west over the air field, flying at an altitude of about 300 feet and approaching at terrific speed.

It roared down, then zoomed up over the hangars and circled the field twice, while those on the ground waved and shouted.

After the second circle, Hawks nosed the plane down and brought it to the ground.

Hawks banked steeply several times at high speed, before landing. He was seated in the open cockpit behind the cabin, while his mechanic Oscar E. Grubb, was inside the cabin.

One hundred persons, besides the newspaper men and motion picture men, crowded about the plane and it was five minutes before the fliers could alight.

PHYLLIS HAVER, MOVIE ACTRESS, IS ENGAGED

FATHER HANGS 9 MONTHS OLD CHILD WITH HIM

Osborne, Kan., Feb. 5.—(U.P.)—A father who hanged his 9-months-old child with him was believed to have been prompted to do the act by financial and domestic worries, officials said today. The bodies of Albert Langley, 39, a farmer, and the baby were found hanging from the same rope at a granary on Langley's farm.

61 PEOPLE KNOWN DEAD FROM THE COLD

POSSIBILITY OF MANY MORE FATALITIES IN OUTLYING DISTRICTS

11 PEOPLE KILLED IN A LANDSLIDE NEAR ALMA ATA, RUSSIAN TURKESTAN

London, Feb. 5.—(U.P.)—Europe and Asia continued to feel the rigors of the worst cold wave in many years today. Sixty-one were known dead with the possibility of many more fatalities when reports from outlying districts should be received.

Eleven were killed in a landslide near Alma Ata, Russian Turkestan, and 26 were lost on the German cargo ship Diester when it went down in the port of Leixos, Portugal, yesterday.

Twenty fishermen were missing after a storm sank six fishing boats off Cape Finistere, Spain, an Exchange Telegraph dispatch received here early today from Madrid reported.

Many deaths were reported from all parts of Europe, including five in Constantinople, where the Bosphorus had a fringe of ice for the first time in 25 years.

Most of the schools in Sofia, Bulgaria and Belgrade, Jugo-Slavia, and many in other towns were closed because of excessively low temperatures, and the two governments took steps to distribute fuel to the needy.

LINDBERGH AIR MAIL ON ITS WAY SOUTH

CONTINUES PIONEERING FLIGHT THROUGH CENTRAL AMERICA

TO LINK UNITED STATES WITH THE PANAMA CANAL ZONE

Managua, Nicaragua, Feb. 5.—(U.P.)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh arrived here from Tela, Honduras, at 3 P. M. local time today.

Belize, British Honduras, Feb. 5.—The Lindbergh air mail continued its pioneering flight through Central America today.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, inaugurating a Pan-American airway service linking the United States with Cuba and the Central American republics, left here at 9:12 A. M. EST for Tela, Honduras. After a brief halt there for fuel, he will continue to Managua, Nicaragua.

Lindbergh's trip so far has been auspicious and true to form. He drove his powerful Sikorsky Amphibian steadily along, making perfect landings and arriving on scheduled time. Leaving Miami at 6:08 A. M. yesterday, he flew the 200 miles to Havana in two hours and 11 minutes, landing at 8:19. He left Havana at 9:23 and arrived here at 3:58 P. M., flying approximately 600 miles in six hours and 35 minutes, an average speed of almost 100 miles an hour.

YOUNG AMERICAN GEOLOGISTS DROWN IN AFRICAN SWAMP

Capetown, South Africa, Feb. 5.—(U.P.)—T. J. Andrews and M. E. Heins, young American geologists, were drowned in a swamp near the Chamesi river in northern Rhodesia while duck hunting, advices reaching here from the interior said today.

It was believed one of the men entered the water to retrieve a duck and the other was drowned while attempting to rescue him.

Members of the council expressed themselves as heartily satisfied with the work accomplished in street snow removal.

The inspector reported that 21 samples of milk and 11 samples of cream had been tested during January, all being found legal. He further reported that 120 hours had been spent in milk inspection service and 324 miles had been travelled in such inspection work.

OUR ATTENTION TO ART

EUROPEAN nations measure their dynasties by spans longer than the short history of the United States. Art in Europe has had the opportunity to expand in centuries of growth. In spite of the exuberant youthfulness of America, "our country," says President Coolidge, "is giving an increasing amount of attention to art."

The president was delivering an address dedicating a sanctuary and singing tower early in February at Mountain Lake, Fla., and we quote in part:

"We have reached a time," said the president, "when our people have more leisure for enjoyment and more means for gratifying their taste. Even during its colonial history it was not without some progress in this direction. Very early it produced painters of historic merit. Some of the architecture of the eighteenth century continues to hold a very high place, but with the exception of a few public buildings these creations were for private use and reached but a few people."

"While the United States has been by no means lacking in spiritual vision, and, considering the circumstances of its surroundings, has been remarkable in the devotion of its religious life, yet, being new and undeveloped, it has been necessary for our people first of all to give their attention to the material side of existence. We have been forced to get things done. We have been required to build cities, improve harbors, open mines, cut down forests, lay out great systems of transportation, till the soil, erect factories, open banks, and develop commerce. We have been making a new Nation out of raw materials. What others have done in many centuries we have crowded into the short space of 300 years. It is only in the last generation that the great body of our people have been sufficiently relieved from the pressing necessities of existence so that they could give some thought to the art of living."

"It is significant of our institutions and of the spirit of our national life that in the opening up of the new era we have attempted to give to the people at large what in other days had been enjoyed only by a fortunate and privileged few. This effort began with popular education. The free public school, the endowed academy and college, the high school, and the State university were the beginnings of this movement. They have more recently been supplemented by public art galleries, popular concerts for the presentation of the best music, and the opening of innumerable public parks. The useful and the practical is being supplemented by the artistic and the beautiful."

"This has been done in no small and niggardly way, but on a vast scale representing an outlay of many hundred millions of dollars."

"Many people have given large sums to these purposes, and municipal, State, and national resources have been employed in ever-increasing amounts."

"It would be a mistake to suppose that the organization of the material side of existence has been completed. It is more likely that it has only just begun. But it has progressed far enough so that a moderate amount of industry and thrift is all that is needed to relieve the great mass of our people from the pinch of poverty, and when these are supplemented with such training and skill as it is possible for almost anyone to acquire, to raise them to a position of comparative affluence. Above this line there are an increasing number of individuals who have sufficient resources to enable them to minister in a most substantial way to the humanitarian and artistic side of life. Some of the largest fortunes which were ever accumulated in the United States have been almost entirely devoted to such charities."

"We can not observe this movement without smiling a little at those who but a short time ago expressed so much fear lest our country might come under the control of a few individuals of great wealth. They claimed that the rich were growing richer and the poor were growing poorer. Our experience has demonstrated that the reverse of this would be much nearer the truth. So many of our people have large amounts of property that it has taken on the aspect of being common. The distinction that it once carried is gone. It is also doubtful if there ever was a time when even great wealth gave its possessors so little power as at present. Their money is of very little value in determining political action. Capital is so easily secured for any promising enterprise that it is no longer necessary to be rich to go into business, even on an extensive scale. The possession of money has never been sufficient to gain the social attentions of persons of culture and refinement."

"On the other hand, the advantages that are enjoyed by people of moderate means, including the great mass of wage earners, were never so great as they are at present. Not only is their income proportionately greater than ever before, but their whole method of life, their opportunities to secure benefits which but a short time ago were the exclusive possession of the rich, have been tremendously increased. I have already referred to the broadening field of education. Another new element is the wide use of the automobile. Whole families are able to have the beneficial results of travel at an outlay which is so small that it is practically within the reach of everyone. Within the last few years the radio has come to afford entertainment and instruction to a great body of our people. Through these instrumentalities the vision has been extended to embrace the wide circle of our rich scenery, and the hearing has been amplified so that it may listen to the eloquence and music of many distant places. Through the medium of the motion picture all that is attractive and instructive in the art of acting and the presentation of scenery is to be had at a very moderate cost. All of this has greatly enriched the life of those who were recently looked upon as poor."

"These grounds which we are dedicating today are another extension of this rapidly developing movement. It has been designated as a sanctuary because within it people may temporarily escape from the pressure and affliction of the affairs of life and find that quiet and repose which comes from a closer communion with the beauties of nature. We have not secured the benefits which I have enumerated without being obliged to pay a price. The multiplicity and the swiftness of the events with which we are surrounded exhaust our nervous energy. The constant impact upon us of great throngs of people of itself produces a deadening fatigue. We have a special need for a sanctuary like this to which we can retreat for a time from the daily turmoil and have a place to rest and think under the quieting influence of nature and of nature's God."

"It is not only through action, but through contemplation that people come to understand themselves. Man does not live by bread alone. This thought is expressed in the motto of the sanctuary in the words of John Burroughs: 'I come here to find myself.'"

It is so easy to get lost in the world. We are so thickly crowded with the forest of events that there is not only danger that we can not see the trees, but that we may lose our sense of direction. Under the influence of these beautiful surroundings we can pause unhindered while we find out where we are and whither we are going. Those who come here report the feeling of peace which they have experienced. In the expression of an ancient writer, it is a place to which to invite one's soul, where one may see in the landscape and foliage, not what man has done, but what God has done.

"The main purpose of this sanctuary and tower is to preach the gospel of beauty. Although they have been made possible through the generosity of Mr. Edward W. Bok, he does not wish them to be considered as a memorial or a monument. While it has been his purpose to give some expression here to his own love of the beautiful, in form, color, and in sound, he has also sought to preserve the quiet majesty of the trees, increase the display of coloring in the flowers, and combine stone and marble in the graceful lines of the tower, all in a setting surrounded by green foliage and reflected in sparkling waters over which the song of the nightingale will mingle with the music of the bells."

TACKLES PROBLEMS
OF FARMER'S WIFEMISS MARY ROKAHR IS FIRST
FEDERAL DIRECTOR OF
HOME MANAGEMENT

Washington, Feb. 4.—(UP)—While President-Elect Hoover and the special session of congress will worry about the farm problem, Miss Mary Rokahr, just appointed first federal director of home management for the department of agriculture, will tackle the problem of the farm wife.

Assisting millions of farm housewives to apply modern methods to their housekeeping is the task assigned to Miss Rokahr.

She comes to Washington from the University of Wyoming. She will undertake to contribute to the relief of the farmer by helping his wife. She will help farm wives save money, and, more important—save their health by giving up back-breaking labor which has made millions of farm wives old and feeble while still young in years.

She will direct activities of 45 field agents who each year visit hundreds of farm homes.

Through cooperation with state colleges and distribution of literature, the home management extension service is made available to virtually every farm housewife in the country. More than 1,000,000 farm homes are now participating in the department's home management program.

Appointment of Miss Rokahr as the first federal director of the home management extension service marks inception of an effort by the department to expand all federal agencies seeking to help the farm housewife. Therefore, these activities have been divided between various government bureaus with no central direction.

N. P. TO SPEND HALF MILLION FOR 7 GAS-
ELECTRIC CARS

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 4.—The Northern Pacific in 1929 will spend nearly $500,000 in the purchase of seven gas-electric cars. These seven cars, five of them of 300 horsepower, will be used in substitution for steam train service. The cars will be put in use on six sections of the Northern Pacific system. One will serve between Duluth and Ashland, another between Fargo and Edgeley, a third between Fargo and Marion, another between Missoula and Darby, and one between Mandan and Killdeer, while two will be placed in service between Glendive and Billings. The latter two cars each will contain two engines of 275 horsepower, making a total horsepower of 550. These units of power regularly will draw two coaches and, when necessary, a third can be handled on this run of 216 miles between Glendive and Billings.

Beware of COLDS
NOW!whether you've had the FLU . . . or not

This is the time of year when serious cold troubles, such as deep chest colds, bronchitis, and pneumonia are always at their worst.

Just now, with so many people in the weakened condition that follows a flu attack, it is more important than ever to heed every cold as a danger signal and check it promptly before complications can set in.

Quick Direct Treatment

At the first sign of a cold, melt some Vicks in a bowl of hot water and inhale its healing vapors. Also place some up each nostril and snuff well back. This quickly opens the air passages.

At bedtime, rub Vicks vigorously over throat and chest and cover with a warm flannel. Most colds yield overnight to Vicks two-fold action:

Acts 2 Ways at Once

(1) Its medicated vapors, released by the warmth of the body, are inhaled direct to the inflamed air passages, loosening the phlegm and easing the difficult breathing.

(2) At the same time, Vicks acts through the skin like a poultice, "drawing out" tightness and soreness, and thus helping the vapors to break up the congestion.

Mothers especially appreciate this simple external treatment because it cannot upset children's delicate stomachs, as too much "dosing" is so apt to do.

OUR ATTENTION TO ART

EUROPEAN nations measure their dynasties by spans longer than the short history of the United States. Art in Europe has had the opportunity to expand in centuries of growth. In spite of the exuberant youthfulness of America, "our country," says President Coolidge, "is giving an increasing amount of attention to art."

The president was delivering an address dedicating a sanctuary and singing tower early in February at Mountain Lake, Fla., and we quote in part:

"We have reached a time," said the president, "when our people have more leisure for enjoyment and more means for gratifying their taste. Even during its colonial history it was not without some progress in this direction. Very early it produced painters of historic merit. Some of the architecture of the eighteenth century continues to hold a very high place, but with the exception of a few public buildings these creations were for private use and reached but a few people."

"While the United States has been by no means lacking in spiritual vision, and, considering the circumstances of its surroundings, has been remarkable in the devotion of its religious life, yet, being new and undeveloped, it has been necessary for our people first of all to give their attention to the material side of existence. We have been forced to get things done. We have been required to build cities, improve harbors, open mines, cut down forests, lay out great systems of transportation, till the soil, erect factories, open banks, and develop commerce. We have been making a new Nation out of raw materials. What others have done in many centuries we have crowded into the short space of 300 years. It is only in the last generation that the great body of our people have been sufficiently relieved from the pressing necessities of existence so that they could give some thought to the art of living."

"It is significant of our institutions and of the spirit of our national life that in the opening up of the new era we have attempted to give to the people at large what in other days had been enjoyed only by a fortunate and privileged few. This effort began with popular education. The free public school, the endowed academy and college, the high school, and the State university were the beginnings of this movement. They have more recently been supplemented by public art galleries, popular concerts for the presentation of the best music, and the opening of innumerable public parks. The useful and the practical is being supplemented by the artistic and the beautiful."

"This has been done in no small and niggardly way, but on a vast scale representing an outlay of many hundred millions of dollars."

"Many people have given large sums to these purposes, and municipal, State, and national resources have been employed in ever-increasing amounts."

"It would be a mistake to suppose that the organization of the material side of existence has been completed. It is more likely that it has only just begun. But it has progressed far enough so that a moderate amount of industry and thrift is all that is needed to relieve the great mass of our people from the pinch of poverty, and when these are supplemented with such training and skill as it is possible for almost anyone to acquire, to raise them to a position of comparative affluence. Above this line there are an increasing number of individuals who have sufficient resources to enable them to minister in a most substantial way to the humanitarian and artistic side of life. Some of the largest fortunes which were ever accumulated in the United States have been almost entirely devoted to such charities."

"We can not observe this movement without smiling a little at those who but a short time ago expressed so much fear lest our country might come under the control of a few individuals of great wealth. They claimed that the rich were growing richer and the poor were growing poorer. Our experience has demonstrated that the reverse of this would be much nearer the truth. So many of our people have large amounts of property that it has taken on the aspect of being common. The distinction that it once carried is gone. It is also doubtful if there ever was a time when even great wealth gave its possessors so little power as at present. Their money is of very little value in determining political action. Capital is so easily secured for any promising enterprise that it is no longer necessary to be rich to go into business, even on an extensive scale. The possession of money has never been sufficient to gain the social attentions of persons of culture and refinement."

"On the other hand, the advantages that are enjoyed by people of moderate means, including the great mass of wage earners, were never so great as they are at present. Not only is their income proportionately greater than ever before, but their whole method of life, their opportunities to secure benefits which but a short time ago were the exclusive possession of the rich, have been tremendously increased. I have already referred to the broadening field of education. Another new element is the wide use of the automobile. Whole families are able to have the beneficial results of travel at an outlay which is so small that it is practically within the reach of everyone. Within the last few years the radio has come to afford entertainment and instruction to a great body of our people. Through these instrumentalities the vision has been extended to embrace the wide circle of our rich scenery, and the hearing has been amplified so that it may listen to the eloquence and music of many distant places. Through the medium of the motion picture all that is attractive and instructive in the art of acting and the presentation of scenery is to be had at a very moderate cost. All of this has greatly enriched the life of those who were recently looked upon as poor."

"These grounds which we are dedicating today are another extension of this rapidly developing movement. It has been designated as a sanctuary because within it people may temporarily escape from the pressure and affliction of the affairs of life and find that quiet and repose which comes from a closer communion with the beauties of nature. We have not secured the benefits which I have enumerated without being obliged to pay a price. The multiplicity and the swiftness of the events with which we are surrounded exhaust our nervous energy. The constant impact upon us of great throngs of people of itself produces a deadening fatigue. We have a special need for a sanctuary like this to which we can retreat for a time from the daily turmoil and have a place to rest and think under the quieting influence of nature and of nature's God."

"It is not only through action, but through contemplation that people come to understand themselves. Man does not live by bread alone. This thought is expressed in the motto of the sanctuary in the words of John Burroughs: 'I come here to find myself.'"

It is so easy to get lost in the world. We are so thickly crowded with the forest of events that there is not only danger that we can not see the trees, but that we may lose our sense of direction. Under the influence of these beautiful surroundings we can pause unhampered while we find out where we are and whither we are going. Those who come here report the feeling of peace which they have experienced. In the expression of an ancient writer, it is a place to which to invite one's soul, where one may see in the landscape and foliage, not what man has done, but what God has done.

"The main purpose of this sanctuary and tower is to preach the gospel of beauty. Although they have been made possible through the generosity of Mr. Edward W. Bok, he does not wish them to be considered as a memorial or a monument. While it has been his purpose to give some expression here to his own love of the beautiful, in form, color, and in sound, he has also sought to preserve the quiet majesty of the trees, increase the display of coloring in the flowers, and combine stone and marble in the graceful lines of the tower, all in a setting surrounded by green foliage and reflected in sparkling waters over which the song of the nightingale will mingle with the music of the bells."

TACKLES PROBLEMS
OF FARMER'S WIFEMISS MARY ROKAHR IS FIRST
FEDERAL DIRECTOR OF
HOME MANAGEMENT

Washington, Feb. 4.—(U.P.)—While President-Elect Hoover and the special session of congress will worry about the farm problem, Miss Mary Rokahr, just appointed first federal director of home management for the department of agriculture, will tackle the problem of the farm wife.

Assisting millions of farm housewives to apply modern methods to their housekeeping is the task assigned to Miss Rokahr.

She comes to Washington from the University of Wyoming. She will undertake to contribute to the relief of the farmer by helping his wife. She will help farm wives save money, and more important—save their health by giving up back-breaking labor which has made millions of farm wives old and feeble while still young in years.

She will direct activities of 45 field agents who each year visit hundreds of farm homes.

Through cooperation with state colleges and distribution of literature, the home management extension service is made available to virtually every farm housewife in the country. More than 1,000,000 farm homes are now participating in the department's home management program.

Appointment of Miss Rokahr as the first federal director of the home management extension service marks inception of an effort by the department to expand all federal agencies seeking to help the farm housewife. Therefore, these activities have been divided between various government bureaus with no central direction.

Important factors in the home management program of the department are preparation of ideal home budgets, introduction of labor saving equipment, planning the home for efficiency, improvement of home grounds, child training, instruction in cooking, purchase and making of clothing.

"Y" DEFEATS DEERWOOD; HIGH FIVE OFF TO PLAY BEMIDJI

RAMBLERS DISPLAY BEST FORM OF YEAR TO WIN BY 26-17

LOCALS STRENGTHENED BY PRESENCE OF JOE FITZ- HARRIS

COACH KASCH'S MEN WILL FIND GOING HARD AT BEMIDJI TONIGHT

The Y. M. C. A. Ramblers journeyed to Deerwood last evening and defeated the Deerwood All Stars 26 to 17. The game was fast and thrilling throughout the locals displaying their best form of the season. In spite of the fact that the Deerwood gym is a small one, a large number witnessed the game.

The Ramblers were strengthened last night by having in their line-up Joe Fitzharris, one of the mainstays of last year's "Y" team, who filled in very well at center, a position which has caused the Y. M. C. A. team trouble all year.

Aro and W. Heikkinen led in the scoring for the Ramblers, each sinking five baskets while Burt and Laitala played good defensive games.

Ness showed up best for Deerwood. The box scores follow:

Coach Warren Kasch's team was off for Bemidji on the 2 P. M. passenger train today.

The team, with the absence of three of the regulars, Wise, Swanson and Gabiou, will find the going hard.

The three regulars were lost to the team for the game through a school ruling.

Paine will occupy the center position with Hautala and Fuller at forwards and Geist and Foster at guards. Fuller was moved up on the firing line from the defense to strengthen the scoring power.

Hoffbauer and Halvorson will sub the forward line with Goedderz ready to step into a guard position.

WAYWARD BLUEBILL HUNTS RICE IN CITY LIMITS? EARLY FALL?

Dr. R. A. Hallquist, dairy inspector, and August Gustafson, city employee, saw a duck yesterday afternoon and thereby hangs a tale, and a mystery as to what a duck in the north in February portends as to weather prognostication.

The two saw the duck fly a few feet above the electric light wires on Fifth street west of the city hall yesterday afternoon. They asserted it was a "bluebill" and that the duck flew over the court house into the hollow below.

Chief of Police Thomas J. Templeton who heard the doctor tell the story this morning said that it was a sure sign "that the big flight is on from the north."

City Attorney D. H. Fullerton was certain that the sight of the duck in these northern parts in midwinter meant that there would be an early fall.

Judge Lamonte P. Koop was of the opinion that the duck was forced to start his flight south because the rice beds were starting to freeze up.

Mr. Jolly Death

A man, with one of the strangest names died recently. He was Mr. Jolly Death, of Fulham, England. Mr. Death was plagued all his life by the peculiarity of his Christian name in relation to his surname. Practical jokes used to telephone to him at all hours of the night to make facetious comments. This became such a nuisance that all telephone calls to his house were watched and one of the offenders was traced.

NOW UNDER PROMOTION OF "GARDEN" FIRM

COL. JOHN S. HAMMOND GETS EX- CLUSIVE RIGHTS OF SERVICES

SCHMELING NOW RANKED AS OUTSTANDING CONTENDER AMONG HEAVYWEIGHTS

By WILLIAM J. DUNN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, Feb. 5.—(U.P.)—If Max Schmeling continues his meteoric climb towards the heights of the heavyweight division, it will be under the promotion of the Madison Square Garden Corporation.

The dark-haired German who startled the boxing world last week with a knockout victory over the durable Johnny Risko has signed a contract or agreement with Colonel John S. Hammond, acting head of the Garden, giving the corporation exclusive rights to his services for the next two years.

The agreement also provides that, should Max's drive for the title vacated by Gene Tunney prove successful, he will make his first defense of it under the promotion of the Garden.

Boxing critics here consider the agreement rather an accomplishment for Colonel Hammond and his associates for Schmeling is ranked almost universally now as the outstanding contender. His victory over Risko and his continuous improvement since his first match here a few months ago have stamped him as the first actual "foreign menace" to reach the United States in years. Schmeling has announced his intention of returning within a few weeks to Germany for a brief visit. He wants to leave as soon as possible and probably will not fight again before the trip.

Cancellation of the contract which called for him to fight Con O'Kelly at the Boston Garden Feb. 15 was understood to have been achieved by Col. Hammond.

The real purpose, however, is believed to be his desire to wrest his management from the hands of Arthur Bulow, fellow countryman, and place his fate entirely in the hands of our own Joe Jacobs.

Father Time Looks Askance at Babe

Mr. Ruth's career ends again . . . Has seen his greatest days . . . However . . . yet . . . still . . . maybe! These are just a few of the rumors which concern the great man as he starts South to begin his training, but no one—not even the Babe—can answer the question, "Will the fence buster" perform as per usual during the coming baseball season?

What a mile it would be! Imagine if you please Edwin Wide, of Sweden, left; Ray Conger, center, America's best miler since Lloyd Hahn has retired, and Dr. Otto Peltzer

BROOKLYN ROBINS ARE FLUTTERING UNCERTAINLY

VETERANS ARE DEMANDING BIGGER PAY EN- VELOPES

FLEDGLINGS ON ROSTER ARE DE- CIDEREDLY UNCERTAIN QUANTITY

By GEORGE KIRKSEY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, Feb. 5.—The Brooklyn Robins are fluttering uncertainly at the moment, with their veterans demanding bigger pay envelopes and their fledglings a decidedly uncertain quantity as far as baseball strength goes.

It will be a month or two before an accurate line can be obtained upon the club's potential strength for the 1929 pennant race. Meanwhile, such additions as Uncle Robbie has made since the close of last season would seem to indicate probable improvement.

For one thing, there is Glenn Wright, easily one of the best short-stops in baseball when at his best, most useful of all the first year men but an indifferent performer in his of 1928, a heavy hitter who may later years at Pittsburgh. Wright may be the making of an infield which probably will have Del Bissonette at first base, Jackie Flowers at second and Gilbert at third.

In 1924 and 1925, Wright's play was sensational, especially in the world series which he helped the Pirates to win. But Glenn neglected training and Donnie Bush had so much trouble with his shortstop that he was glad to trade him to the Robins for Jess Petty.

Wright is the most important added strength on the Robins roster, and Petty the most serious loss, unless "Daddy" Vance continues in his holdout role. But there are some youngsters in whom the Brooklyn manager has considerable confidence.

Billy Rhief, former Ogleshorpe football player and baseball star, is Uncle Robbie's favorite new nephew. He has played the infield and the outfield and has a reputation as a heavy hitter. He may be tried at third base, or used in the outfield if there is a place among such performers as Bressler, Cullop, Herman and Hendrick, none of whom is any too reliable. Max Rosenfeld may win a regular berth as Robbie thinks this rookie is a star.

Gilbert, another youngster, has first call at third base, on the strength of some creditable performances toward the close of the 1928 season, while Bissonette at the initial sack proved himself one of the steps in baseball when at his best, most useful of all the first year men but an indifferent performer in his of 1928, a heavy hitter who may make a name for himself on the at-tack.

Behind the bat the Robins will be unusually weak, having only Deberry, Hemline, Gooch and a youngster known as Alonzo Lopez, who already looks quite as capable as anyone of the fading veterans.

Their probable squad will include: Pitchers—Vance, Elliott, Ehrhardt, Moss, Clark, McWeeny, Ballou and Koupal.

Catchers—Deberry Lopez and Henline.

Infielders—Bissonette, Flowers, Rhief, Wright, Bader and Gilbert.

Outfielders—Bressler, Cullop, Fredrick, Hendrick, Herman, Lee and Rosenfeld.

JACK DEMPSEY AS LAST RESORT FOR ARBITER

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 5.—(U.P.)—Jack Dempsey will select an arbitrator in case Jack Sharkey and Young Stribling cannot agree on one of the following 10 men to officiate for their fight here Feb. 27:

Tommy Reilly, Philadelphia; Dave Miller and Walter Eckersall, Chicago; E. Dickerson, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Lou Magnolia and Jack O'Sullivan, New York; Matt Hinkle, Cleveland; Slim McDaniel, Detroit, or two to be named by the Massachusetts Boxing commission.

Two All-Around Stars

By QUIN HALL.

It may be a sock in the beak for romance in sport but it cannot be truthfully said that every great baseball player was born with a puck in his fist or that every great baseball player came into life wearing a fielder's mitt on his paw. Neither can it be yodeled that every great billiard star first saw the light of day swathed in a green felt balnet. It might add a certain glamor if it were possible to refer to such occurrences as the truth, but it isn't possible so it's rather foolhardy to try to kid ourselves.

On the contrary it is possible to cite many instances where the outstanding stars of certain sports today have been mixed up in other sports before they finally found their niches and got to a place where the fans started to talk about them.

There are two cases which come to mind right off hand.

Take, for instance, Johnny Layton, who recently for the fifth time kept the three-cushion billiard championship when he defeated Willie Hoppe for the title at Orchestra Hall, Chicago. It might add romance to Layton if it were possible to say that Johnny used a billiard cue for a teaching ring back in the days when his father used to walk the floor with him. But such isn't the case. Johnny was born in Stewardson, Illinois, and his first job was as a carpenter. Measuring angles with a square during his carpentry duties may have aided him in laying a foundation for angles on a green table but before he became famous as a billiardist his history shows that he was a jockey, a professional baseball player, a boxer, a pro wrestler, a trapshooter and an expert flycaster. Glamor enough, but it wasn't all centered around the cue game.

But after a shot at all of these sporting activities Johnny blossomed forth as a billiardist and has worked his way up to the peak of fame on the green tables. Layton, incidentally, is one of four men who have held both the pocket and angles titles. He won the pocket title in 1916.

Jumping from the green tables to ice we'll take up the case of Lionel Conacher, the defense star of the New York American hockey team. While he is now an outstanding figure in the ice sport and while only a short time ago the Toronto Maple Leafs offered the Americans $25,000 for him, he has not always been active in hockey. Once upon a time Conacher was a boxer. Then he took up baseball and lacrosse and gained quite a little fame as an oarsman. He diversified his sporting activities considerably before he finally decided to specialize in hockey and when a rival team thinks he is worth $25,000 it can be assumed that he has reached stardom in his finally chosen line.

The star-spangled Americans have been making great progress in the International League this season and no small share of their success is credited to the work of Conacher.

The Conacher family is noted for athletic ability, although Lionel cannot recall that his father was ever active in sports. He has two twin sisters, Nora and Cathleen, 17 years of age, who are soft-ball (indoor baseball) experts and they play with the Supremes in Toronto. They are battery mates. In addition, Conacher has a cousin, Grace who is an all-around athlete, starring in track and basketball.

These two instances prove that a stone which looks solidly placed, now may have, at some time or another, done considerable rolling and gathered quite a little moss.

"IN THE SPRING A YOUNG MAN'S FANCY"

Oh, Evangeline Anderson's Queen of the May:
 Ay yay round-dolly yay hoo hoo!
 She's prettier'n Minerva is, some people say:
 Ay yay round-dolly yay hoo hoo!
 How I love 'Evangeline!
 Don't I wish she were mine!
 Ay yay round-dolly yay hoo hoo!

Oh, but she is too nice—yea, far too nice:
 Ay yay round-dolly yay hoo hoo!
 That I with her should be showered with rice.
 Ay yay round-dolly yay hoo hoo!
 And so, rather than pine,
 I'll just WISH she were mine!
 Ay yay round-dolly yay hoo hoo!

MODERN HISTORY CLASS
DECIDES FOR NAPOLEON

Napoleon Bonaparte was the subject of a very interesting debate Friday afternoon in the fifth period Modern History class. The particular question involved was, "Resolved: That Napoleon Bonaparte is to be admired for the good that he did in the world." Each side furnished two debaters—David Weber and Howard Storm for the affirmative and Jean Cass and Stuart Patterson for the negative. After the arguments had been duly presented, a vote was taken and the class members gave an overwhelming decision to the affirmative. But the instructor cast her lot in favor of the negative for the reason that one of the affirmative speakers nullified all that he had previously said, by a mis-statement which was too flagrant to be overlooked.

Donald McKay, a graduate of the Brainerd high school, class of 1924, who is now Ensign on the U. S. S. Downs, has been informed that he is to be in charge of the coast guard contingent in the inaugural parade March 4th, when Herbert Hoover becomes president of the United States. This is a signal honor which has been conferred upon Donald and for which we heartily congratulate him.

The Biology classes have just been studying fresh human blood under the microscope. The blood was furnished by members of the class who were courageous enough to prick their fingers with a pin hard enough to cause the flow of blood.

Rumor has it that Stewart Patterson has been practicing orating with disastrous effects. It seems that in the most effective part of the speech, he was forced by his mother to stop after breaking two light bulbs, a teapot and splitting a new shirt.

Mr. Elden was out of school last week with influenza. His place was taken by Mrs. Iverson, the school substitute. Mr. Elden tells us that he is well on the way to recovery and is even going on a jack-rabbit hunt soon.

The annual Declamatory contests are fast approaching. The local elimination will be held here on Friday, the eighth. Miss Taylor announces that a number of entries have been made in each section of the contest (oratorical, dramatic and humorous) and some keen competition may well be expected.

One of the Seniors says the thing he likes about Macbeth is that all the actors die in the last act. It's a good thing these bloodthirsty Seniors don't have any bright ideas around the time of the Junior class play.

Howard Storm, rushing to the library: "I want 'Adrift on a Dishpan.'"

The above cut was carved out of a piece of linoleum by Milford Downie, Jr., last year's editor-in-chief. The drawing is an impressionistic portrayal of the wrecking of the high school and is called "The Lowdown on the New School." In the foreground is a steam shovel emptying a load of debris into a truck while the background shows the remaining wall of the old school.

THE FACULTY

Pekin, a small Illinois town, is the birth place of Mrs. Fleming. She attended the Pekin grade school but went to Peoria for her advanced education. She set out with the intention of becoming a lawyer like her father. At the last moment, however, she took a Normal course and became a full fledged teacher.

Her first kick in life came when she arrived in Brainerd the next year and saw a frontier town quite different from Peoria. The hardest thing he did in her two years of teaching in Brainerd was overcoming her fear of Indians.

She was married the next year to Mr. Fleming and promptly forgot all about teaching. After a while she began to teach as a substitute in case of some teachers' absence and finally, after her husband's death, she returned to the pedagogy for good. At least we hope it is permanent.

She too, has seen her share of the world having visited most of the beauty spots on this continent and practically all in the West Indies. Her hobbies in life right now are golf, farming and her grand-children. The whole school joins in hoping that she continues to teach a long time in B. H. S.

SEMPER PARATUS CLUB
MEETS THURSDAY EVE

Fruit salad, sandwiches and cocoa capped the climax at the Semper Paratus social meeting Thursday night.

A short one-act pantomime, "The Lamp Went Out," starring David Weber, Ross Olmsted, Joe Heald, Dick Ebert and Zane Smith was presented by Edythe Titus as the opening feature on the evening's program. After the laughter and applause had subsided, Betty Robertson was called on for a biography of Robert Louis Stevenson. Genevieve Jenkins was next with a report on the works of Willa Cather. The program closed with readings by Margaret Holm and Miss Olson.

Much credit is to be given Miss Olson and Miss Mathis, the new advisors, and the committees for their efforts in making the evening a grand success.

SOPHS! MORE! DUES!

Are you planning to attend the Sophomores picnic in the spring? How would you enjoy a sleigh ride right now? Just imagine the bells ring as you dash through the snow! But can YOU go? Have YOU paid YOUR dues? How can you expect to appear at any function given by your classmates until you have contributed your share of the expense?

Our class picture must go into the annual. Soph funds are low and we need money. Bring in the cash before the snow melts or before school is out for the summer! We can't have fun without any money so do your bit and then watch for further announcements.

DON GEIST OPENS
YEAR BOOK SALE

The sales campaign for the 1929 Brainerd annual was opened in the City hall last Thursday by Donald Geist, sales manager, who gave a brief outline of the contents of our year book and dragged many dollars from the pockets of the student body with his snappy sales talk.

This introduction was followed on Friday morning by salesmen covering all first period classes, who talked again on the advantages of owning an "annual of '29" and who willingly took everyone's 50c and supplied each with a receipt.

The drive was announced by Don as being very successful and there will undoubtedly be further drives in the future.

YE EDITOR

Often when one is working under great difficulties or when one's labors seem to be taken for granted and are not appreciated, a little praise works wonders and everything begins to look rosy. Lately Mr. Kasch has been looking rather glum whenever he thinks of injuries, ineptibilities and lack of practicing facilities.

The Minneapolis Journal published the following article last Sunday. It expresses the thoughts of the school much better than we are able, so we quote it in full hoping it will convince Mr. Kasch that we appreciate his work:

Brainerd, Minn., Feb. 2.—Warren Kasch, former All Conference star at Cornell University and now coach of the local high school for football and basketball has done remarkably well under all kinds of handicaps in both sports since becoming a member of the high school staff.

Upon Kasch's arrival in Brainerd, neither of the above sports amounted to much in the percentage table. When the basketball season opened for him in a strange territory in the fall of 1927 he had but two letter men back and still made a good showing. Last season he had six letter men back and of the 20 games played his team won 16 and lost 4 to top the conference and district championships.

This year, however, Coach Kasch has again been under a severe handicap, which in no way should reflect upon his coaching ability. The high school was destroyed by fire last year, leaving him without a place for his team to practise. Ineligibility, injuries have also crippled the team and the coach has found it a difficult task to put a first class quintet in the field.

It is difficult enough with everything running smoothly to turn out winning teams without all these handicaps and few understand Coach Kasch's difficulties but the above reasons should explain Brainerd high school's poor showing this year in football and basketball.

THE FACULTY

Josephine Graham, diminutive history instructor in the B. H. S., was born in Brainerd not so very far back. In fact it was such a little while back that she gave an interview only on the condition that the biography be a short one as she is quite sure that most everybody will remember all the interesting things that have come her way. However, she does give us permission to tell of her high school career.

Though she was very busy majoring in history, she found time for many extra curricular activities. At the U. of M. she again majored in history and graduated with a B. S. in the spring of 1924. The big thrill of her life came in the form of a jaunt around Europe.

The three months she was abroad enabled her to visit most of the places she had dreamed of and also gave her the opportunity of buying the postal cards which she now uses to make her history classes just a wee bit more interesting than the average run.

The years that she has taught in B. H. S. have tended to increase the good will of the town towards her. As for us, we hope she never leaves the teaching staff.

B. H. S. TAKES UP
COMMUNITY SINGS

Monday morning during the 1st period the students of B. H. S. participated for the first time in a school song fest at the City Hall. The singing was led by Mr. LaMeter, the director of the Boys Glee club, with Miss Olson as accompanist and the songs that were chosen were the old favorites, "Battle Hymn of the Republic," "My Old Kentucky Home," "Old Black Joe," and "When You and I Were Young Maggie."

At the Old Court House Miss O'Brien conducted the singing and Miss Marshall played the piano. Miss O'Brien first dictated the words of "Go Brainerd" for the benefit of the Freshmen and all those who had forgotten them and then proceeded to have the Frosh and Sophs sing them. After singing the school song a few times they sang "America the Beautiful" and ended up with "The Spanish Cavalier."

On the whole, the song fest was very successful. We greet further activities of this kind with great enthusiasm.

ALUMNI

Miss Eleanore Nolan, graduate of '26, left for New York where she has been offered a position in a law office. While there she will continue her study of law.

Miss O'Brien: "When your name is called, come to the desk, take your test paper and pass out."

Teacher: Is this theme original?
 Freshie: "No, I wrote it myself."

Those taking honors at bridge were Mrs. Lutz and Dean White, and in 500 Miss Margaret Michaels and Roy Meyers took honors. Approximately 100 attended the party. Refreshments were served by the members.

The next of the series will be given next Monday evening; which will be the last one before Lent. Those in charge say they are making preparations for an even greater number than attended last evening.

BRAINERD

From the Daily Dispatch

February 4, 1904

A. E. Moberg left this afternoon for Cass Lake on business.

Ole Skogen of Pequot is at St. Joseph's hospital and is in a very serious condition. Some time ago he froze both feet and they were not properly cared for. It was found necessary to immediately amputate both feet, one above the ankle and the other just below it with a part of the heel left on.

"IN THE SPRING A YOUNG MAN'S FANCY"

Oh, Evangeline Anderson's Queen o' the May;
 Ay yai round-dolly yay hoo hoo!
 She's prettier'n Minerva is, some people say;
 Ay yai round-dolly yay hoo hoo!
 How I love 'Evangeline!
 Don't I wish she were mine!
 Ay yai round-dolly yay hoo hoo!

Oh, but she is too nice—yea, far too nice;
 Ay yai round-dolly yay hoo hoo!
 That I with her should be showered with rice.
 Ay yai round-dolly yay hoo hoo!
 And so, rather than pine,
 I'll just WISH she were mine!
 Ay yai round-dolly yay hoo hoo!

MODERN HISTORY CLASS
DECIDES FOR NAPOLEON

Napoleon Bonaparte was the subject of a very interesting debate Friday afternoon in the fifth period Modern History class. The particular question involved was, "Resolved: That Napoleon Bonaparte is to be admired for the good that he did in the world." Each side furnished two debaters—David Weber and Howard Storm for the affirmative and Jean Cass and Stuart Patterson for the negative. After the arguments had been duly presented, a vote was taken and the class members gave an overwhelming decision to the affirmative. But the instructor cast her lot in favor of the negative for the reason that one of the affirmative speakers nullified all that he had previously said, by a misstatement which was too flagrant to be overlooked.

Donald McKay, a graduate of the Brainerd high school, class of 1924, who is now Ensign on the U. S. S. Downs, has been informed that he is to be in charge of the coast guard contingent in the inaugural parade March 4th, when Herbert Hoover becomes president of the United States. This is a signal honor which has been conferred upon Donald and for which we heartily congratulate him.

The Biology classes have just been studying fresh human blood under the microscope. The blood was furnished by members of the class who were courageous enough to prick their fingers with a pin hard enough to cause the flow of blood.

Rumor has it that Stewart Patterson has been practicing orating with disastrous effects. It seems that in the most effective part of the speech, he was forced by his mother to stop after breaking two light bulbs, a teapot and splitting a new shirt.

Mr. Elden was out of school last week with influenza. His place was taken by Mrs. Iverson, the school substitute. Mr. Elden tells us that he is well on the way to recovery and is even going on a jack-rabbit hunt soon.

The annual Declamatory contests are fast approaching. The local elimination will be held here on Friday, the eighth. Miss Taylor announces that a number of entries have been made in each section of the contest (oratorical, dramatic and humorous) and some keen competition may well be expected.

One of the Seniors says the thing he likes about Macbeth is that all the actors die in the last act. It's a good thing these bloodthirsty Seniors don't have any bright ideas around the time of the Junior class play.

Howard Storm, rushing to the library: "I want 'Adrift on a Dishpan'."

The above cut was carved out of a piece of linoleum by Milford Downie, Jr., last year's editor-in-chief. The drawing is an impressionistic portrayal of the wrecking of the high school and is called "The Lowdown on the New School." In the foreground is a steam shovel emptying a load of debris into a truck while the background shows the remaining wall of the old school.

THE FACULTY

Pekin, a small Illinois town, is the birth place of Mrs. Fleming. She attended the Pekin grade school but went to Peoria for her advanced education. She set out with the intention of becoming a lawyer like her father. At the last moment, however, she took a Normal course and became a full fledged teacher.

Her first luck in life came when she arrived in Brainerd the next year and saw a frontier town quite different from Peoria. The hardest thing he did in her two years of teaching in Brainerd was overcoming her fear of Indians.

She was married the next year to Mr. Fleming and promptly forgot all about teaching. After a while she began to teach as a substitute in case of some teachers' absence and finally, after her husband's death, she returned to the pedagogy for good. At least we hope it is permanent.

She too, has seen her share of the world having visited most of the beauty spots on this continent and practically all in the West Indies. Her hobbies in life right now are golf, farming and her grand-children. The whole school joins in hoping that she continues to teach a long time in B. H. S.

SEMPER PARATUS CLUB
MEETS THURSDAY EVE

Fruit salad, sandwiches and cocoa capped the climax at the Semper Paratus social meeting Thursday night.

A short one-act pantomime, "The Lamp Went Out," starring David Weber, Ross Olmsted, Joe Heald, Dick Ebert and Zane Smith was presented by Edythe Titus as the opening feature on the evening's program. After the laughter and applause had subsided, Betty Robertson was called on for a biography of Robert Louis Stevenson. Genevieve Jenkins was next with a report on the works of Willa Cather. The program closed with readings by Margaret Holm and Miss Olson.

Much credit is to be given Miss Olson and Miss Mathis, the new advisors, and the committees for their efforts in making the evening a grand success.

SOPHS! MORE! DUES!

Are you planning to attend the Sophomore picnic in the spring? How would you enjoy a sleigh ride right now? Just imagine the bells ring as you dash through the snow! But can YOU go? Have YOU paid YOUR dues? How can you expect to appear at any function given by your classmates until you have contributed your share of the expense?

Our class picture must go into the annual. Soph funds are low and we need money. Bring in the cash before the snow melts or before school is out for the summer! We can't have fun without any money so do your bit and then watch for further announcements.

DON GEIST OPENS
YEAR BOOK SALE

The sales campaign for the 1929 Brainerd annual was opened in the City hall last Thursday by Donald Geist, sales manager, who gave a brief outline of the contents of our year book and dragged many dollars from the pockets of the student body with his snappy sales talk.

This introduction was followed on Friday morning by salesmen covering all first period classes, who talked again on the advantages of owning an "annual of '29" and who will, highly took everyone's 50c and supplied each with a receipt.

The drive was announced by Don as being very successful and there will undoubtedly be further drives in the future.

YE EDITOR

Often when one is working under great difficulties or when one's labors seem to be taken for granted and are not appreciated, a little praise works wonders and everything begins to look rosy. Lately Mr. Kasch has been looking rather glum whenever he thinks of injuries, ineptibilities and lack of practicing facilities.

The Minneapolis Journal published the following article last Sunday. It expresses the thoughts of the school much better than we are able, so we quote it in full hoping it will convince Mr. Kasch that we appreciate his work:

Brainerd, Minn., Feb. 2.—Warren Kasch, former All Conference star at Cornell University and now coach of the local high school for football and basketball has done remarkably well under all kinds of handicaps in both sports since becoming a member of the high school staff.

Upon Kasch's arrival in Brainerd, neither of the above sports amounted to much in the percentage table. When the basketball season opened for him in a strange territory in the fall of 1927 he had but two letter men back and still made a good showing. Last season he had six letter men back and of the 20 games played his team won 16 and lost 4 to cap the conference and district championships.

This year, however, Coach Kasch has again been under a severe handicap, which in no way should reflect upon his coaching ability. The high school was destroyed by fire last year, leaving him without a place for his team to practise. Ineligibility, injuries have also crippled the team and the coach has found it a difficult task to put a first class quintet in the field.

It is difficult enough with everything running smoothly to turn out winning teams without all these handicaps and few understand Coach Kasch's difficulties but the above reasons should explain Brainerd high school's poor showing this year in football and basketball.

THE FACULTY

Josephine Graham, diminutive history instructor in the B. H. S., was born in Brainerd not so very far back. In fact it was such a little while back that she gave an interview only on the condition that the biography be a short one as she is quite sure that most everybody will remember all the interesting things that have come her way. However, she does give us permission to tell of her high school career.

Though she was very busy majoring in history, she found time for many extra curricular activities. At the U. of M. she again majored in history and graduated with a B. S. in the spring of 1924. The big thrill of her life came in the form of a jaunt around Europe.

The three months she was abroad enabled her to visit most of the places she had dreamed of and also gave her the opportunity of buying the postal cards which she now uses to make her history classes just a wee bit more interesting than the average run.

The years that she has taught in B. H. S. have tended to increase the good will of the town towards her. As for us, we hope she never leaves the teaching staff.

B. H. S. TAKES UP
COMMUNITY SINGS

Monday morning during the last period the students of B. H. S. participated for the first time in a school song fest at the City Hall. The singing was led by Mr. LaMeter, the director of the Boys Glee club, with Miss Olson as accompanist and the songs that were chosen were the old favorites, "Battle Hymn of the Republic," "My Old Kentucky Home," "Old Black Joe," and "When You and I Were Young Maggie."

At the Old Court House Miss O'Brien conducted the singing and Miss Marshall played the piano. Miss O'Brien first dictated the words of "Go Brainerd" for the benefit of the Freshmen and all those who had forgotten them and then proceeded to have the Frosh and Sophs sing them. After singing the school song a few times they sang "America the Beautiful" and ended up with "The Spanish Cavalier."

On the whole, the song fest was very successful. We greet further activities of this kind with great enthusiasm.

ALUMNI

Miss Eleanore Nolan, graduate of '26, left for New York where she has been offered a position in a law office. While there she will continue her study of law.

Miss Helen Templeton, Miss Margaret Springer, and John Tribun, students of the St. Cloud Teacher's College, spent the week end here.

Miss O'Brien: "When your name is called, come to the desk, take your test paper and pass out."

Teacher: Is this theme original?
 Freshie: "No, I wrote it myself."

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

IRENE ROBELINE, in love with handsome Guinn Holden, the young Texas town minister, is bitterly disappointed when he marries Lilith, a beautiful blonde, who had boasted that she would force him to propose to her. A year later Lilith dies during childbirth. Irene then marries Holden, believing he could be made to forget the past and make her happy with his love. Before this event she had rejected Will Lundy, the town doctor, in love with her. With Will she organized a meeting to uphold the pastor when the deacons of the church tried to expel a member for drunkenness. After marriage Irene devoted her whole life to Guinn's comfort and success. With Lilith, the baby, she found a more difficult problem, as her father had thoroughly spoiled her. In her he constantly saw the picture of his dead wife—the same golden hair, blue eyes and soft pink skin. Irene knew that Mattie Anson, the town gossip, was aware of Holden's spiritual loyalty to the dead Lilith. When Irene's child was born she believed Guinn's love would be fully hers. Instead he entered the room with Lilith in his arms "to see Lilith's little sister." After eighteen years of married life Irene finds the same unseen barrier—Holden loves and spoils the beautiful Lilith, now graduated from college, while Tina, Ross and Lundy, Irene's own children by him, occupy lesser stations in his heart and mind. "Lilith is older," was his answer to Irene's remonstrances when Lilith was favored, and Lilith knew how to get her selfish wishes gratified by her father.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXI

BUT a woman knows a man fairly well if she has been married to him for that long. She knew his secret thoughts, when he would wander pensively on the lawn beside her, but lost in dreams of Lilith. She could touch him with her hand if she wished, but he was years away from her, suddenly divorced from her by his memories of the other. Swiftly the girl who had been grave dust for years and years would rise before him, more alive than life itself. He would see a golden head, laughing eyes, lovely as lupins, lips curved softly, would hear again, "Do you love me a little bit?"

Ah, dear God, yes, he loved her! When some interruption came to break the spell for him and he came back to reality, Guinn would not notice that Irene was pale and quiet. Or perhaps he would ask her if the heat had tired her or some church bore had been too much for her.

He was a clean minded man and he wouldn't for a moment think he was disloyal to his wife. Now and then he would preach a sermon, to men only, on immorality. He would rehearse the hideousness of adultery, with a clear conscience. His wife could have told him there was a disloyalty of spirit as heartbreaking as the mere physical. Men were strange.

Memory drifted back to the time when Patricia was born, the baby, ten years younger than Tina. Tina had loved her and helped care for her, but Lilith hadn't bothered with the baby. Lilith had not troubled to exert herself for anyone. At twelve she had been a slender, golden girl with none of the awkwardness or temperamental uncertainty that most adolescent girls suffer. She had poise and grace, a dreamy dignity that was at the same time intensely awake. Tina, just two years younger, had seemed far more a child, thin and wiry muscled, vibrant with energy, leaping to do a service for everyone in the house. And imposed on by all except her mother. She'd tried to make it her study to see that Tina didn't do more than her share of work or of giving up. She could see the child now, as she'd spring to fetch her father's slippers or book, divining his wishes without need of speech from him. We would thank her absent-mindedly and turn with more alert interest to Lilith, who hadn't bothered to exercise either her mind or her muscles to do anything for him. But it appeared that beauty did not need to serve.

Tina hadn't been beautiful as Lilith was, but she had had a vivid, eager face, with a hint of the gypsy in her great dark eyes, her dark hair that would never lie straight, but seemed always wind blown about her face, her swift, woodland grace of movement. She had had funny little ways of speech and gesture that were endearing to one who studied her, a quick play of expression that alternated from wistful affection to laughter.

Irene sighed as she saw Mattie Anson turning in at the gate. Now she'd talk, so there'd be no chance to think. . . . Miss Mattie came often to the parsonage, not for sympathy or comfort as most of the church did, because she never seemed to require it. She seemed to have little personal life of her own, but lived on the gossip she heard and dispensed about others. She found the parsonage good pickings. She got all the harmless news Irene knew, though no confidences were betrayed. She prided herself on speaking her mind and she scolded Irene as if she were five years old.

"Why don't you let those two big boys of yours weed this garden?" she said by way of greeting. "You wear yourself out to a frazzle for the family and the church."

"But I like gardening," said Irene. "Sit here and talk to me while I weed."

Sheba appeared on the walk, a long, tall negress with a face like a comic mask to scare children. Her lip stuck out and her eye was belligerent.

"The preacher, he 'phone and say he bringing two people to dinner," she snapped.

"That's too bad," said Irene. "But we'll have to do the best we can. Slice the roast left from yesterday and make some of your good sauce to go with it, tomatoes and peppers. You've enough vegetables. Ask Miss Tina to see about the salad and dessert."

Sheba turned and stalked back toward the kitchen. Irene sighed as she thought how hard it was to reconcile Guinn's hospitality with such a rebellious servant. She had to scrimp on wages because of the inelasticity of a pastor's salary.

Sheba wasn't more than two jumps from the jungle Guinn said when she first came to them, seventeen years ago, and she hadn't improved in looks much since then. Guinn said she was rough but not ready. She felt that he brought home too much company to meals. When she was in a good humor, which was seldom, because of his incurable hospitality, she sang in a loud, yodeling voice; but when she was sulky, she clucked like a setting hen.

"You let yourself be run over by company," Miss Mattie scolded. "Guinn brings 'em," Irene countered.

"Can't you break him of the habit?"

"Seems not. I've tried."

"There was that missionary that stayed two months and was getting ready to write his wife to join him, when I put my tongue in. The preacher's cracked over company and you're too pizen polite. You'll end in the poor-house vet, mark my words!"

Irene eased to a more comfortable position for weeding. "No, there's the Old Ministers' Relief Fund. I'm counting on that. I understand that if a preacher has been in hard and continuous service for a long lifetime, he can draw perhaps as much as twenty-five dollars a month to support him and his wife."

"Cat's foot! If I had a husband I'd rather he drank or gambled the roof off my head than to be eternally trucking in company!"

Irene laughed.

Miss Mattie shot a look at her and said succinctly: "The preacher didn't tote home so much company when he was married to Lilith. She wouldn't 'a' let him."

A flush flickered over Irene's face, but she spoke quietly. "I'd rather be free to do what he wants in his own home."

"You sure do pamper that man! You ought to be bored for the simple."

Miss Mattie's wart wiggled in indignation and she rose to go. She gave a cluck of disgust. "Then there's delegates. Every convention that meets in two hollers and a whoop of this town has a passel of delegates to entertain. And too many of 'em land on you."

Irene gave her comfortable laugh.

"Do you want to work yourself to death so's the parson can marry a third wife?" she snapped.

"No." But that third wife would have her sympathy, her sisterly compassion from the cemetery!

"Widowers always marry again, and preachers are the swiftest to lope to the altar. And so many women in a church run after the preacher that he needs a wife for a bulldog to protect him."

Irene laughed. "I didn't exactly stand still myself, did I, Miss Mattie?"

"That you didn't. You didn't say much, but you worked fast. Abby Whitaker and some others ain't got it through their heads yet how you managed it. Did you propose?"

"No, but maybe I would have if it had taken that."

"That trick worked all right the first time with him. And the charm has never wore off. Lilith was angel cake with frosting in his eyes."

"I have to be to him what Goethe said his wife was 'a comfortable loaf of brown bread.'"

Irene jerked up a weed with sudden passion.

"He hankers for his angel cake." The shrewd eyes were fixed on her face. Then she turned and walked away.

Miss Mattie's remark clung like a cocklebur in her mind long after she was gone. . . . Irene could see Guinn in her mind, as she often noticed him, in a thoughtful mood, his dark eyes gazing at the sky's distance, or studying the dreamy depths of the fire, or looking down a tree-shadowed street as if watching for some one to come. Was he missing Lilith? Was he wishing she were there instead of her?

. . . . How many times had she seen him take the little Lilith on his lap, smooth back her pale-gold curls from her white brow and gaze into her blue eyes with adoration! Was it the child alone, or the mother in the child that he loved so utterly? On jealousy was a hateful feeling, corroding the soul! She wasn't naturally jealous, but love, uncertain of its own status, was capable of terrible passion. Love that doesn't know itself based on absolute surety can always waken it to life. . . . And what was she to Guinn, after all? What had she been to him in the eighteen years of their marriage? Had she been but flesh to slake his absent-minded passion? Merely a body to bear him children that he loved indifferently? Would she ever be his wife?

Impatient Griselda

by Dorothy Scarborough

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

IRENE ROBELINE, in love with handsome Guinn Holden, the young Texas town minister, is bitterly disappointed when he marries Lilith, a beautiful blonde, who had boasted that she would marry him to propose to her. A year later Lilith dies during childbirth. Irene then marries Holden, believing he could be made to forget the past and make her happy with his love. Before this event she had rejected Will Lundy, the town doctor, in love with her. With Will she organized a meeting to uphold the pastor when the deacons of the church tried to expel a member for drunkenness. After marriage Irene devoted her whole life to Guinn's comfort and success. With Lilith, the baby, she found a more difficult problem, as her father had thoroughly spoiled her. In her he constantly saw the picture of his dead wife—the same golden hair, blue eyes and soft pink skin. Irene knew that Guinn, the town gossip, was aware of Holden's spiritual loyalty to the dead Lilith. When Irene's child was born she believed Guinn's love would be fully hers. Instead he entered the room with Lilith in his arms "to see Lilith's little sister." After eighteen years of married life Irene finds the same unseen barrier—Holden loves and spoils the beautiful Lilith, now graduated from college, while Tina, Ross and Lundy, Irene's own children by him, occupy lesser stations in his heart and mind. "Lilith is older," was his answer to Irene's remonstrations when Lilith was favored, and Lilith knew how to get her selfish wishes gratified by her father.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXI.

BUT a woman knows a man fairly well if she has been married to him for that long. She knew his secret thoughts, when he would wander pensively on the lawn beside her, but lost in dreams of Lilith. She could touch him with her hand if he wished, but he was years away from her, suddenly divorced from her by his memories of the other. Swiftly the girl who had been grave dust for years and years would rise before him, more alive than life itself. He would see a golden head, laughing eyes, lovely as lupins, lips curved softly, would hear again, "Do you love me a little bit?"

Ah, dear God, yes, he loved her! When some interruption came to break the spell for him and he came back to reality, Guinn would not notice that Irene was pale and quiet. Or perhaps he would ask her if the heat had tired her or some church bore had been too much for her.

He was a clean minded man and he wouldn't for a moment think he was disloyal to his wife. Now and then he would preach a sermon, to men only, on immorality. He would rehearse the hideousness of adultery... with a clear conscience... His wife could have told him there was a disloyalty of spirit as heart-breaking as the mere physical... Men were strange...

Memory drifted back to the time when Patricia was born, the baby, ten years younger than Tina. Tina had loved her and helped care for her, but Lilith hadn't bothered with the baby. Lilith had not troubled to exert herself for anyone. At twelve she had been a slender, golden girl with none of the awkwardness or temperamental uncertainty that most adolescent girls suffer. She had poise and grace, a dreamy dignity that was at the same time intensely awake. Tina, just two years younger, had seemed far more a child, thin and wiry muscled, vibrant with energy, leaping to do a service for everyone in the house. And imposed on by all except her mother. She'd tried to make it her study to see that Tina didn't do more than her share of work or of giving up... She could see the child now, as she'd spring to fetch her father's slippers or book, divining his wishes without need of speech from him. He would thank her absent-mindedly and turn with more alert interest to Lilith, who hadn't bothered to exercise either her mind or her muscles to do anything for him. But it appeared that beauty did not need to serve.

Tina hadn't been beautiful as Lilith was, but she had had a vivid, eager face, with a hint of the gypsy in her great dark eyes, her dark hair that would never lie straight, but seemed always blown about her face by her swift, woodland grace of movement. She had had funny little ways of speech and gesture that were endeared to one who studied her, a quick play of expression that alternated from wistful affection to laughter.

Irene sighed as she saw Mattie Anson turning in at the gate. Now she'd talk, so there'd be no chance to think... Miss Mattie came often to the parsonage, not for sympathy or comfort as most of the church did, because she never seemed to require it. She seemed to have little personal life of her own, but lived on the gossip she heard and dispensed about others. She found the parsonage good pickings. She got all the harmless news Irene knew, though no confidences were betrayed. She prided herself on speaking her mind and she scolded Irene as if she were five years old.

"Why don't you let those two big boys of yours weed this garden?" she said by way of greeting. "You wear yourself out to a frazzle for the family and the church."

"But I like gardening," said Irene. "Sit here and talk to me while I weed."

Sheba appeared on the walk, a long, tall negress with a face like a comic mask to scare children. Her lips stuck out and her eye was belligerent.

"The preacher, he 'phone and say he bringing two people to dinner," she snapped.

"That's too bad," said Irene. "But we'll have to do the best we can. Slice the roast left from yesterday and make some of your good sauce to go with it, tomatoes and peppers. You've enough vegetables. Ask Miss Tina to see about the salad and dessert."

Sheba turned and stalked back toward the kitchen. Irene sighed as she thought how hard it was to reconcile Guinn's hospitality with such a rebellious servant. She had to scrimp on wages because of the inelasticity of a pastor's salary. Sheba wasn't more than two jumps from the jungle Guinn said when she first came to them, seventeen years ago, and she hadn't improved in looks much since then. Guinn said she was rough but not ready. She felt that he brought home too much company to deals. When she was in a good humor, which was seldom, because of his incurable hospitality, she sang in a loud, yodeling voice; but when she was sulky, she clucked like a setting hen.

You let yourself be run over by company," Miss Mattie scolded. "Guinn brings 'em," Irene countered.

"Can't you break him of the habit?"

"Seems not. I've tried." "There was that missionary that stayed two months and was getting ready to write his wife to join him, when I put my tongue in. The preacher's cracked over company and you're too pizen polite. You'll end in the poor-house yet, mark my words!"

Irene eased to a more comfortable position for weeding. "No, there's the Old Ministers' Relief Fund. I'm counting on that. I understand that if a preacher has been in hard and continuous service for a long lifetime, he can draw perhaps as much as twenty-five dollars a month to support him and his wife."

"Cat's foot! If I had a husband I'd rather he drank or gambled the roof off my head than to be eternally tracking in company!" Irene laughed.

Miss Mattie shot a look at her and said succinctly: "The preacher didn't tote home so much company when he was married to Lilith. She wouldn't 'a' let him."

A flush flickered over Irene's face, but she spoke quietly. "I'd rather he felt free to do what he wants in his own home."

"You sure do pamper that man! You ought to be bored for the simple."

Miss Mattie's wart wiggled in indignation and she rose to go. She gave a cluck of disgust. "Then there's delegates. Every convention that meets in two hollers and a whoop of this town has a passel of delegates to entertain. And too many of 'em land on you."

Irene gave her comfortable laugh.

"Do you want to work yourself to death so's the parson can marry a third wife?" she snapped.

"No." But that third wife would have her sympathy, her sisterly compassion from the cemetery!

"Widowers always marry again, and preachers are the swiftest to lope to the altar. And so many women in a church run after the preacher that he needs a wife for a bulldog to protect him."

Irene laughed. "I didn't exactly stand still myself, did I, Miss Mattie?"

"That you didn't. You didn't say much, but you worked fast. Abby Whitaker and some others ain't got it through their heads yet how you managed it. Did you propose?"

"No, but maybe I would have if it had taken that."

"That trick worked all right the first time with him. And the charm has never worn off. Lilith was angel cake with frosting in his eyes."

"I have to be to him what Goethe said his wife was 'a comfortable loaf of brown bread.'"

Irene jerked up a weed with sudden passion.

"He hankers for his angel cake." The shrewd eyes were fixed on her face. Then she turned and walked away.

Miss Mattie's remark clung like a cocklebur in her mind long after she was gone. Irene could see Guinn in her mind, as she often noticed him, in a thoughtful mood, his dark eyes gazing at the sky's distance, or studying the dreamy depths of the fire, or looking down a tree-shadowed street as if watching for some one to come. Was he missing Lilith? Was he wishing she were there instead of her?

How many times had she seen him take the little Lilith on his lap, smooth back her pale-gold curls from her white brow and gaze into her blue eyes with adoration! Was it the child alone, or the mother in the child that he loved so utterly? On jealousy was a hateful thing, corroding the soul! She wasn't naturally jealous, but love, uncertain of its own status, was capable of terrible passion. Love that doesn't know itself based on absolute surety can always wake it to life.

And what was she to Guinn, after all? What had she been to him in the eighteen years of their marriage? Had she been but flesh to slake his absent-minded passion? Merely a body to bear him children that he loved indifferently? Would she ever be his wife?
